SYLLABUS :

Inter-Cultural Understanding & Communication

1) Orientation and overview:

What is intercultural understanding?

Students are given a sense of what to expect through examples.

The stage is set for all to engage in the next two sessions to enable them to maximize the value of their participation.

Emphasis will be on listening and understanding.

2) Objectivity and open-mindedness:

Each student will be given an opportunity to give a 5 minute presentation about themselves to their partner and will then introduce their partner to the audience.

They will find that although we think of ourselves as open-minded and objective, our approach to ourselves, our circumstances and others are formed and at times obscured by pre-existing ideas and notions that we have formed by our values, upbringing, or past experiences.

3) Transformation and freedom from communication anxiety:

No matter how successful or accomplished one might be, fear and anxiety will play a role in all of our lives at one time or the other.

Often we will allow our fears and anxieties to stop us from communicating properly.

Power to choose is uniquely human and by making the right choices we will be able to communicate more accurately.

Conclusion and Summary.
